Progress of the Great Trial Before the General Assembly.

This was the second day devoted to the actual trial of Prof. Briggs before the general assembly on the charge of heresy. So far from diminishing, the interest in the case would seem to be on the increase. made a report from the committee on this sub-ject, which reiterated the deliverance of the last assembly. The consideration of the re-port was made the second order. Dr. Briggs Resumes.

Dr. Briggs then took the floor and continue his argument on the charges brought against him. He began with the discussion of the question whether the claim of the errancy of the Bible is opposed to the standards.

In the course of his argument then he said:
The charge of the prosecution is, that errors in Holy Scripture conflict with the essential doctrine that "Holy Scripture is the Word of God written." The prosecution may think that there is conflict here, but they are mistaken. The reason why they see conflict is bethat there is conflict here, but they are mis-taken. The reason why they see conflict is be-cause they interpret "Word of God written" differently from what I do. They put into this doctrine in their original specification, "true and full inspiration," meaning so far as we can determine—(1) plenary inspiration; (2) verbal inspiration; (3) inerrancy. Let me remark at the outset that although I admit the phrase "true and full inspiration," it is not a phrase of the outset that although I admit the phrase "true and full inspiration," it is not a phrase of the confession or of Holy Scripture. The only phrase of the confession used by them in this statement is "the Word of God written." I hold to the "true inspiration of the Word of God written," but I also hold that there are errors in Holy Scripture, and that there is no inconsistency between there statements. The inconsistency is in the mind of the prosecutors, because they already include in the term full inspiration, verbal inspiration and inerrancy; whereas I use plenary, or full, in the grammatical and historical sense as referring to the ceptacle which it incloses.

DIVINE INSPIRATION. When I say the Scriptures are full of divine inspiration I mean that the Scriptures as writinspiration I mean that the Scriptures as writings are filled full with an inspired rule of faith had been received. and practice, which rule fills and pervades Scripture in all its parts. I have the authority of John Wallis, a clerk of the Westminster assembly, for this view, when he says: "The Scriptures in themselves are a lanthorn rather than a light; they shine, indeed, but it is alieno their original luster by passing through this medium, and appear not so glorious to us as they are in themselves. They represent God's of its heroes who rest in its neighborho ing the Westminster confession than an American theologian or than the last general assembly at Portland.

WHAT THE CONFESSION TEACHES. The confession represents that God "committed wholly unto writing" "that knowledge not touch upon knowledge not necessary to salvation. If there are errors in such matters as are not necessary to salvation, what has that to do with this passage? When it is said that God committed that wholly unto writing does.

Was by no means a small undertaking. Willing hands were numerous, however, and it is safe to say that the flowers were all utilized in paying tribute to those who lost their lives to present the Union.

The bride was dressed in pearl gray silk, with white lace trimmings in the corsage. Her hat harmonized with her costume in coloring and she looked charming indeed.

She carried a bunch of bride roses and lilies. God committed that wholly unto writing, does it teach that God himself committed to writing, or does it imply the use of holy penmen? Manifestly the latter.

If then God used holy penmen to commit this knowledge to writing you cannot conclude that these penmen did not commit to writing, together with this knowledge of God necessary to salvation, other knowledge which was not necessary to salvation, and if so you cannot conclude that there were no errors in that matter which these men wrote, unless you can also prove that God commissioned them to commit of Potomac Woman's Relief Corps, which is not considered the content of the morning one body of works and the committee of the possible. Not more than fifty people were present in the church to witness the ceremony. This wedding is a happy consummation of a commissioned them to commit of decoration. This wedding is a happy consummation of a committee of the physicians who had attended her. Dr. ter which these men wrote, unless you can also prove that God commissioned them to commit this also to writing. You cannot prove any such thing from this passage of the contession, which limits itself to "knowledge necessary to salvation." Furthermore, "commit to writing day not include a province of the contession, which was the contession to writing the contession of the contession. ing" does not imply any more than that this knowledge of God necessary to salvation is wholly in these writings. It does not imply that the words which contain this knowledge with human and fallible material. THE WRITTEN WORD OF GOD

Honored This Beautiful Decoration Day.

Patriot Dead.

Fragrant Blossoms Laid Upon the Graves Distinguished Men.

A bright sun greeted the day. Clear skies smiled down on the ceremonie Fluttering flags and lovely flowers decked the graves of departed heroes. Patriotic men and loyal women listened to the clarion voices of eloquent orators, to the deep-toned resonance of pious prayers, to clear-tuned singers and throbbing bands, and bowed their heads in honor of men, who, putting aride plow and tools, booke and instruments, had shouldered muskets and marched through danger and sickness, through clash of saber and rain of shot, often to mutilation, often to death; and all this not for personal gain, not for personal aggrandizement, but that a united flag, a united country might be handed down as intact as they had been received.

In short, it was Decoration day.

THE ARMY OF THE DEAD.

During the war 359,528 Union soldiers gave up their lives in battle or in the dread struggle with disease. Since the war closed thousands upon thousands more have joined the silent ory of soldiers who would march no more.

lumine; it is not their own, but a borrowed light. It is God, which is the true light that shines to us in the Scriptures, and they have no other light in them, but as they represent to us somewhat of God, and as they exhibit and hold forth God to us, who is the true light that 'enlighteneth every man that comes into the world.' It is a light, then, as it represents God unto us, who is the original light. It transmits some rays; some beams of the divine nature; but they are refracted, or else we should not be able to behold them. They lose much of their coriginal luster by passing through this count and a signal in the world. dot the parks, have been draped flags and floral wreaths. At the different cemeteries the boom of cannon has resounded, only to be followed by the soul-stirring singing of patriotic songs and the delivery of eloquent words. Thousands have been present at these ceremonies. Thousands have had their thoughts turned to the army of the dead and thousands have been better for it. Such orators as Wm. E. Simonds, Benjamin Butterworth, Rev. Geo. L. Spinning, Rev. Olin Eidridge, Chaplain W. H. Honn and J. Madison Cutts have electrified hearts to a newer and higher realization of the deeds of the departed.

The circus was on its way to Lewistown from Houtsdale. The engineer lost control of the train when going down the mountain and it jumped the track when going at a speed of forty miles an hour, throwing fourteen cars, over a thirty-foot embankment. The most of the animals were badly hurt and a number escaped to the woods, but were recaptured.

The train is demelished and it is the worst wreck in this locality for many years.

Those killed are: William Henry, brakeman, of Tyrone: Frank Brain of Indianapolis, Wm. Mutterby of East Liberty, Pa.; John Stayer of Houtsdale, Pa., and an unknown man called "Barney."

The difference between the size of Sunday's crowd and the number of tickets received by the admissions bureau is to be investigated by world's fair officials. Two or three of the leading spirits place Sunday's crowd at 200,000, others at 150,000, while the United Press sent out the conservative estimate of 125,000. All of these figures, according to the bureau of

There is nothing to prove that there were more people in the grounds than is indicated by the report of the department of sd-missions. I cannot believe, however, that the 94,000 reported or the 110,000 estimated by the bureau of admissions by any means indicates the real number there were inside Jackson Park and Midway Plaisance. I do not feel, however, that the matter should be discussed at the present time. However, I made a tour of the entire grounds at 3 o'clock, and at that time I am convinced there were 150,000 people in the

of these figures, according to the bureau of admissions, are wrong, as they have returns from but 94.857 people. The officials think the highest estimate is nearly right, and will try to find out today or tomorrow whether or not there is a leak.

There is no way of estimating accurately the crowd beyond the returns from the gates. The grounds and buildings cover so much territory that even those accustomed to estimating crowds can hardly form an intelligent idea. Any one of the great exhibit buildings can swallow a crowd of many thousands and give no hint. At one time Sunday afternoon, for instance, the fisheries building, which always attracts its share of visitors, was so crowded that it was difficult to get into the aquarium wing, let alone to see any of the fish.

Then, there are hundreds of byways and pockets, such as the side shows on the plaisance. There was not a time, for instance, during the afternoon when there were less than 5,000 people in the German village, and unless the visitor went inside the gates he would pase them by in
